MEDIEVAL DAGGER

This is a wartime story which recently came to us, and we feel that it's fascinating enough to pass on to you. It happened in Germany while the big push was on, and it concerns PFC Stan Fisher who told us the tale in the first place.

It was his regiment that spearheaded the invasion, and he'll never forget the night when they pitched camp at the edge of a dense, dark forest. They didn't care to venture into the trees—there was something threatening and downright scary about the place. Corporal Brinner told them what it was. He was an educated man—in fact, a college professor in civilian life, and he'd traveled in this section many times before the war.

It seems that these woods were known as the Haunted Forest. Many centuries ago—this was the legend as he had heard it—a traveling sorcerer from a distant land had arrived in this area. He sought only to do good, but the cruel people of the region had fallen upon him and slain him. Before he died, he had sworn to come back and aid other deserving strangers who might need help at this spot—and as he breathed his last gasp, the forest had sprung up magically at this spot as if as a memorial to the slain sorcerer. That was the story.

"Corp, you're a real killer-diller!" said PFC Stan Fisher. "What a yarn! You can't tell me you're not kidding us!" Then, like his buddies, he burrowed into his blankets and slept.

Next day, a surprise Nazi attack hit them with devastating force. It was every man for himself, and Stan, retreating into the depths of the forest, was soon hopelessly lost. There were Germans around, no doubt of it—several times he narrowly escaped with his life. Around noon, he heard a voice weakly calling for help. Maybe it was a trap, but he couldn't resist the imploring tone. He tracked it down, and was amazed to find not a soldier, but a civilian. And a strangely-dressed one, too—clad in old-fashioned looking doublet and jerkin. He hadn't known that the people of the countryside dressed like this. But there wasn't any time to study styles, for the man was wounded, probably by a stray bullet. Stan did the best he could for him, dressing his wound and giving him wound tablets and water, even though for him to remain in this area was a risk to his very life.

When he'd finished, the man expressed his thanks fervently, and insisted on pressing a gift on him. It was, strangely enough, a medieval dagger—what a present for a modern-day soldier! And when Stan attempted to thank him, oddly enough, the man had completely disappeared. Scratching his head in bewilderment, Stan continued his trip into the forest—a trip that was cut short by the sniper's bullet that blasted him down.

He had rolled with the shock of it, and was now far from his gun. And he could see the sniper coming down from his tree, a good way off. He was coming over to make sure that he'd finished Stan off, and there wasn't a doubt that he'd shoot at the slightest movement. So there lay PFC Stan Fisher, a clay pigeon for a Nazi. He didn't have a weapon. Wait a second—he did! The medieval dagger! Only because he was out of his head did he do what followed. Springing to his feet, he hurled the old dagger towards the oncoming sniper. It was crazy—at this distance, no knife could hit! But straight and true flew the dagger, and the Nazi went down. And at this moment, Stan fainted.

He recovered as the stretcher bearers were moving him back to the medics, and he babbled out the tale of what had happened. "Relax, fella," said one of the bearers consolingly. "You're a little delirious! Nobody in the world could ever make a throw like you tell—and besides, I saw that sniper's body! I don't know what killed him, but there sure enough wasn't any medieval dagger in his body!"

He must have been out of his head, Stan admitted to himself. But then, at the hospital, he found himself bedded next to Corporal Brinner, who was also recuperating from a battle wound. The time passed rather heavily, and Brinner was telling stories again. "I know I told you the one about the Haunted Forest and the old sorcerer," he said, "but there was something I forgot to mention! They say that if he meets somebody deserving in trouble, or who's going to have trouble, he passes along a medieval dagger—and that does the job every time!"

From YOUR EDITOR to YOU!

You're giving us a tough time, readers! By every mail, your letters are pouring in, sending us what we've asked for—your opinions regarding every aspect of your magazine and ours, "Forbidden Worlds". Every one is read carefully and we thank you for them. Naturally, we can't print them all—there just isn't room enough. But each month, we'll publish what we can—who knows, perhaps your letter will be next! Send it to The Editor, "Forbidden Worlds", 347 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. Now—let's look at the mail!

"Dear Editor:-

I've just finished reading my first copy of 'Forbidden Worlds' and am enclosing $1.20 for a year's subscription, so that I won't miss any future issues. I really go for your magazine, and will go for it even more in the future if your stories are a bit more on the gruesome, unbelievable side. How about it?

—Mrs. Ruth Brittain, Grass Valley, Cal."

We're glad to welcome you as a subscriber, Mrs. Brittain. If by "unbelievable" stories you mean amazing, tense adventures, we promise them to you. Gruesome? Expect thrills galore, but don't seek the silly, done-to-death vampire-zombie-werewolf type—we've gotten on to more mature stuff!

"Dear Editor:-

I think 'Forbidden Worlds' is one of the most exciting magazines I've ever laid eyes on. It has a new meaning to it and makes more sense than any other. I'll always be a steady reader of your fine, interesting book. I believe your story 'The Unseen & Unheard' was one of the greatest, as was 'Across All Barriers'. Keep up the fine work!

—L. Bowen, Pipestone, Minn."

It's wonderful to get such an enthusiastic response from a reader! Thanks loads—and be sure that we'll never let down our high standards!

"Dear Editor:-

I've been reading the raves you run about your stories, and they get me where I live! I think your stuff is the worst I ever read—why don't you run this 'fan' letter?

—Albert Nailor, Milwaukee, Wis."

All right, Albert—we'll run your little letter! Does it make you happy? Sorry you don't like our efforts—but we don't think we could ever satisfy your type anyway!

"Dear Editor:-

I've just finished reading your No. 51 issue. It was great! 'Take It Easy' was the best story I ever read!

—Neil Shapiro, Pittsford, N. Y."

Now, that's what we like to hear! But just when we relax with our warm feeling—something like the next letter appears!

"Dear Editor:-

I think that 'Forbidden Worlds' is the best magazine on the market. But I was awfully surprised at you when I read 'Take It Easy', in your February issue. How could you ever let a story like that creep into your magazine?

Neil Shapiro, above, just doesn't agree with you on "Take It Easy"—and neither do we, since we loved that one! But it takes a lot of opinions to make up a magazine!

"Dear Editor:-

I want to tell you how much I like 'Forbidden Worlds'. I think the best story in your October issue was 'A Day In The Life of Tommy Trent'. 'Underneath The Island' rates second with me. 'The Invisible Men', however, isn't so good, but you can't please everybody. In the December issue, I thought the best story was 'Man With The Crescent Scar'. 'Jimmy and The Genie' was okay, but 'A Storm of Meteors' leaves much to be desired. The short stories like 'The Camera Never Lies' and the series 'Out of The Unknown' are very good. You can bet I like your book and will continue buying it!

—Richard W. Lilie, St. Louis, Mo."

You set your estimate down nicely. You're the type of fan who knows exactly what he likes and what he doesn't, and that makes things easier for an editor. We'll try to keep satisfying you!

Automatic Firing Tripod Machine Gun

IT'S MAGAZINE FED—SWIVELS IN ALL DIRECTIONS!

Kids, here's an authentic reproduction of a U.S.A. type 1917A1 water cooled machine gun, loaded with devastating fire power. Imagine the thrill as you advance with your machine gun blasting the enemy in a hail of fast firing automatic repeating pellets.
